

Successful conference run completed

London, UK and Philadelphia, US. 30 September 2011

Methodware has had another successful mid-year conference season, culminating in the Annual Conference of the Chartered Institute of Internal Auditors (IIA) in London and the Federal Enterprise Risk Management (FederalERM) Summit in Arlington, VA, in September.

The IIA Conference saw more than 250 delegates assemble in central London for a hugely successful event. Methodware was there, with business development lead Neil Patrick not only hosting the ERA Kairos platform but also co-chairing one of many relevant and interesting sessions at the event, How to develop relationships at strategic level, increase influence and build internal audit capability.

Neil comments: "Methodware continued to impress at the 2011 Annual IIA Conference. We were very happy with the participation and level of interaction with delegates."

Meanwhile, Methodware's North America sales director, David Zach, was in Arlington, VA, for the FederalERM 2011 Summit. David says: "I was very impressed with the progress made with ERM since last year. Attendance was about the same and the subject matter and general level of discussion was on a high level. I met several of the presenters, including the Director of Risk Management for the Department of Homeland Security. Now if someone has to deal with ERM, find me a better candidate! It was a one-day affair as opposed to two days last year yet remained well represented and very well coordinated."

We look forward to seeing you at an event later this year. Let us know where you'll be.

www.methodware.com/contact-us

Image ©Dave Perris, Lucky Dog Photography